

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter will conclude the report and provide suggestions for the English Literature and Translation Transfer study programs.

5.1 Conclusion

From the internship experience that the author has passed for ± 4 (four) months. It can be concluded that the internship activities that take place not only involve the implementation of work tasks, but also require commitment, dedication, and willingness of interns to be actively involved. A successful internship is the result of good cooperation between interns, supervisors, and study programs as internship organizers. During the internship, interns could develop their technical and non-technical skills and understand the dynamics of working in the translation industry. Interns can build a valuable professional network with large companies or organizations, as a start to opening partnerships for career paths after graduation. The internship process provides opportunities to develop technical and non-technical skills, such as writing, communication, and problem-solving. The problem some interns may face is that they are unclear about the purpose of the internship and the steps to be taken. But with these problems, interns can gain further knowledge in a particular field and understand industry practices more deeply.

An effective internship involves good planning, performing tasks relevant to the purpose of the internship, and reflecting on the experience gained. In addition, good mentorship is a key factor in internship success. The development of skills such as time management, open communication, and careful planning of activities can enhance the potential of interns.

In addition, internship activities not only provide benefits for interns but also provide benefits and positive impacts on partnership companies as a place to carry out internship activities, and other benefits and positive impacts are obtained by the department as the organizer of internship activities to be able to produce the best graduates and have professional skills that are ready to enter the industrial workforce.

With this, the success of internship activities is not only measured by the extent to which interns can complete work tasks, but also can integrate the learning gained during the internship into college life, as well as being able to adapt to the work environment, and develop individuals who are ready to contribute to the world of work.

Overall, the internship was a rewarding experience that provided many opportunities for personal and professional growth. Despite some challenges, solutions such as good communication and structured planning can help to overcome problems and ensure that interns get the most out of the experience. Continuous improvements in planning, communication, and focus on goals can ensure that internships run more smoothly and have a positive impact on the intern's future development.

5.2 Suggestions

The author's suggestions for Translation Transfer and Ma Chung University English Literature Study Program, for future internship programs and for the company itself are as follows:

1. It is highly recommended to be able to provide a schedule or syllabus of activities for interns. So that interns can carry out activities efficiently and the objectives of internship activities will be more stable balanced with more conceptualized activity planning and regular meetings with learning sessions involving interns, which include group discussions, project presentations as an overview of the work process at Translation Transfer, and Translation Transfer can make special skill development sessions.

2. Suggestions for the English Literature study program of Ma Chung University include time management and skills training to help interns prepare more professionally and interns can learn better through practical experience and projects that require problem solving. Furthermore, suggestions that can be given to the English Literature study program at Ma Chung University are to be able to choose companies or institutions that have a background in translation, literature, and language-related fields of study. As well as having better accuracy and attention to detail in scheduling internship activities.
