

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS

The things I learned from the process of making this project is the difference between being selfish and being free. There is a big difference between freedom and selfishness, but when we look at people, we might think that there is no difference between freedom and selfishness. Because both freedom and selfishness look the same.

Being selfish is when someone does many things he wants or what he desires, whenever and wherever he wants, and the person will not put any considerations about other people. Also, he will not think about any responsibility that comes with his actions.

So, things that I can conclude from my short story is, being free and being selfish are two different things that look almost the same between them. The only difference among those two is, freedom comes with responsibility in every action that someone does.

However, being selfish is different, being selfish does not come with any responsibility, because when someone is being selfish, they only think about what they desire at the moment without any thought of their surroundings.

So, in my conclusion there is a crystal-clear difference between a desire to be free and just being selfish. But many people still think there is no difference between these two, because they do not know what the difference is.
